

Index to the History of the Maricopa Audubon Society, 1953-1968 (Book One)

Cover: Our Chapter: 1953-1968 MARICOPA AUDUBON

Forward: This book is dedicated to Jack Wetmore, early chapter member and volunteer chapter historian. Almost all of the material in Book One has been obtained from Jack's carefully assembled MAS Chapter Scrapbook. It contains news clippings, documents, records and memorabilia relating to our chapter since its founding in Phoenix, July 1953. The Greater Roadrunner, Geococcyx californicus, painting on the cover of Jack's original scrapbook was the artwork of Walter E. Bohl. Jack's news clippings and documents were carefully transferred from his original scrapbook because that scrapbook's pages were disintegrating with age. Additional chapter photographs and documents were melded with Jack's documents by Bob Witzeman, editor, of this Book One history of our chapter.

Arizona Republic, 12-29-66, by Ben Avery, Starlings Rout Woodpeckers. (Avery reports on Phoenix Xmas Count for 1966) [Mrs. Demaree thinks starlings are a threat to Gila Woodpeckers in Arizona.] Avery reports 89 species reported on 1966 Phoenix Christmas Count, up from only 73 counted the year before (because sewage ponds were dry that year). Demaree had reported a high of 104 species in 1956. Editors note: (Bob Witzeman, Editor, Our Chapter, Maricopa Audubon 1953-1968) states that the current "high" species count for this Xmas circle area, to date, was set in 1972 with 165 species recorded. In that year MAS (and special thanks to Janet Witzeman) marshaled statewide and national birders to attend and participate;

*The Arizonian, 1-26-67 story by Lina Juliber, Fearless girl reporter goes bird walking [reporter states MAS Encanto Bird Walks were her first bird walk since field classes in High School. Juliber interviews Bix Demaree who "...confided that her first bird walk was at the age of two because bird watching was her father's hobby. In college her major was chemistry but her strong interest in ornithology grew, especially after she came to Arizona."---
